WE ARE WATER

We are Water
connecting communities

TÓ DANIIDLị

SOMOS EL AGUA

What does water mean to you? To your community?
The Four Corners is home to deserts, grasslands, forests, rivers, and mountains. It is also home to our communities. From desert, to forest, to our communities, all life here depends on water.

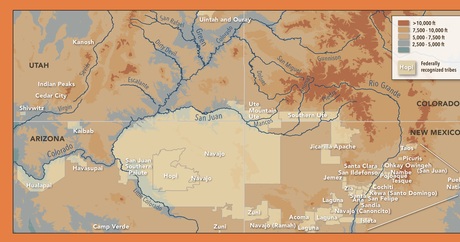
In years with enough rain and snow, we're grateful to have water to sustain us. In years of low rainfall, we worry about the lack of water and ongoing drought.

We all have stories of the scarcity of water. Will we have enough to drink? To raise our crops? Will there be enough water in rivers and reservoirs for recreation? What about the environment?

Together we celebrate water, worry about it and argue about it. We can also come together to create the water future we want for our region.

Join We are Water to explore the water we share, the water that sustains us. Learn what water means to communities in the Four Corners. Add your voice to the stories of water here.

What has water meant to you? What do you think the future of water use will look like both for your community and for others?



Uintah and Ouray
Kanab
UTAH
Indian Peaks
Cedar City
Shivwits
Kaibab
ARIZONA
Havasupai
Hualapai
Navajo
San Juan Southern Paiute
Hopi
Navajo
Camp Verde
Zuni
Navajo (Ramah)
Laguna
Acoma
Zuni
Navajo (Chinle)
Navajo (Leupp)
Navajo (Tuba City)
Navajo (Kayenta)
Navajo (Shiprock)
Navajo (Crownpoint)
Navajo (Tohatchi)
Navajo (Ft. Defiance)
Navajo (Chinle)
Navajo (Ganado)
Navajo (Chinle)
Navajo (Chinle)
Navajo (Chinle